Mental health is one of the top health issues in the North San Diego County community and although Palomar Health was already addressing the needs on a micro level, they developed an initiative to help solve the behavioral health crisis in the community on a larger scale. The behavioral health initiative implemented by Palomar Health served to meet the patient where they need care most, and included:

- Opening of the first hospital-based Crisis Stabilization Unit in San Diego County.
- Creating a Patient Safety Companion program to provide friendly 1:1 interaction/observation for patients who are at risk of harming themselves or others.
- 24/7 access to a psychiatrist with providers onsite day and night at Palomar Medical Center Escondido who provide assessments in the emergency department and inpatient units.
- Opening an outpatient substance use disorder center called The Recovery Center at Poway.
- A combined adult and geriatric psychiatry unit with 29 beds at Palomar Medical Center Poway.
- Executing a joint venture partnership with Kindred Rehabilitation, the first of its kind, to develop a 120-bed psychiatric hospital.

Palomar Health was the first to open a hospital-based crisis stabilization unit (CSU) in San Diego County. The location of this facility was specifically chosen adjacent to the emergency room at the hospital creating convenient and quick access to the patient and allowing law enforcement to return to the community quicker. The CSU is also staffed with Peer Support Specialists who are employees with past experiences similar to that of the patient's and are an integral component of the care team and patient recovery.
In response to the COVID-19 pandemic in 2020, the Desert Healthcare District and Foundation (DHCD/F) established the Coachella Valley Equity Collaborative, creating a new model to achieve strategic equitable, and community-wide outreach and service delivery in close partnership with the Riverside County Department of Public Health.

The Collaborative consisted of eight community-based and faith-based nonprofit organizations. These communities, which included farmworkers, seniors, and students among many others, were disproportionately affected by COVID-19 due to multiple barriers to health care. DHCD/F secured funding support to bring these organizations together to identify and remove the barriers preventing protection from the virus for the valley’s most vulnerable residents. The Collaborative quickly grew to encompass more than 25 community partners.

The Coachella Valley Equity Collaborative is innovative in its multifaceted, community-centric, grassroots approach to education and the delivery of resources to communities often considered on the fringe or forgotten by society.

A great deal of this work was conducted by promotoras, or community health workers, who are the most innovative component of the Collaborative. While community health leaders continue to advocate for California state board-certification, local promotoras demonstrated they are an invaluable asset at valley test sites, vaccination clinics and more.

An essential educational component was translating communications and marketing materials (social media, flyers, as well as public service announcements on television and radio) that were in English to Spanish and Purépecha, two languages commonly spoken in the Coachella Valley. All these factors contributed to strengthening community-wide protection against a virus that does not discriminate against any population.
Morongo Basin Healthcare District, since the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, has spent over $500,000 for local hunger relief in a project called Feeding Morongo Basin.”

“Efforts included monthly food distributions coordinated by staff who packed over 4,000 food boxes for distribution at our two Morongo Basin Community Health Centers. Other food relief projects included one-time grants to area food pantries to help them stay afloat during the darkest days of the pandemic, and the establishment of a “Hunger Helpline” food box delivery for those who were homebound or elderly.

After the pandemic when life in the Basin returned to a new “normal,” the need for food relief was still evident. Now, the focus is the immediate distribution of food to District health center patients who identify food insecurity as an issue in their current situation. During a patient visit to the health center, two diagnostic questions are administered during the patient intake process to ascertain if food insecurity is present. Affirmative answers trigger health center staff to provide a bag with three-days of non-perishable food and information about other local food resources. Patients are also connected with District staff who are trained to assist them in applying for CalFresh food stamps.

Food distribution to those in need is common with federal and private organizations providing distribution programs. What makes this initiative unique is that it addresses the link between chronic food insecurity and health issues. Based on the understanding that food is medicine, relieving food insecurity in the Morongo Basin is part of the District’s strategic plan, seeking to implement multiple solutions to mitigate the negative impact on health.

This program has provided food resources to families who are struggling to make ends meet in our community. The Morongo Basin Healthcare District is proud of our efforts to improve access to nutritious foods for Basin residents and thereby improving their health and overall wellness.
The Fallbrook Regional Health District began hosting Mental Health First Aid program as part of our effort to support the unmet needs surrounding mental health in our community. Mental Health First Aid teaches the participant how to identify, understand and respond to signs of mental illness and substance use disorders. The training provides information and skills one may need to reach out and provide initial support to someone who may be developing a mental health or substance use problem, and provides information on how to help connect them to the appropriate care. Additionally, the program has multiple modules that can be tailored for specific groups (e.g., First responders, teens, medical professionals), it is also offered in Spanish language.

While it is clear that there is an increasing need for mental and behavioral health service, there are few options to dramatically increase the number of providers in any community. Mental Health First Aid allows individual community members to become educated and empowered about basic mental health concerns. Participants also learn easy tactics to use if someone in their workplace, home, or community demonstrates a mental health concern. The program is an 8-hour, nation-wide, evidence-based training course that can also be conducted virtually, thus it is a program that any health district could offer.

The program is offered nation-wide, so even if another District couldn’t bring it forward or didn’t have County support, the classes can all be accessed virtually. While virtual isn’t always the best option, it is an easy way for a District to host a program in a rural community or where individual access could be challenging.

We began the classes in Spring of 2022, and have had 60 individuals finish the certification in four months. The classes have exceeded our initial expectations and we are ramping up the schedule and exploring the additional modules for those attendees who would like to advance to a next level of education.
